Quiet Re-Opening At Budapest University

— AP Feb. 4. — The universities and colleges of Budapest, breeding ground of the October anti-Communist revolt, reopened quietly today. Communist police in a series of raids, had arrested "counter-revolutionary students and seized hidden stores of weapons in dormitories and basements.

Lectures were resumed just three months after Russian tanks attacked Budapest, to crush the rebellion that the students had done so much to inspire.

The reopening was accompanied by a warning from Gyula Kalai member of the Communist party's executive committee, that "every attempt by counter-revolutionary students or teachers to disturb the restoration of order will be ruthlessly smashed."

Another Cabinet minister asserted that "Marx-Leninism must continue to be the guiding spirit for education of Hungarian youth." One of the student's chief complaints had been against compulsory classes in Communist political theory.

Classes resumed in the Law School, the Technical University,

RELEASED BY HUNGARY

Four Students To Face Foreign Office Enquiry

Four young Oxford University students, released after a fortnight's imprisonment in Hungary, were back in England yesterday, safe and sound. Their adventure, which nearly developed into a serious cold war incident, has ended with accusations of irresponsibility and the British Foreign Office has ordered an enquiry into the students' behaviour.

LONDON PAPERS

Two London newspapers have given the story top billing. The Daily Express yesterday published the byline account of 22-year-old Roger Cooper and 19-year-old Judith Cripps. Simultaneously, the opposition Daily Mail presented the first-hand experiences of the brothers, Christopher and Basil Lord, aged 21 and 25 respectively.

SUDDEN RELEASE

The Hungarians arrested the four British students when they attempted to drive in a broken down German car from Yugoslavia to Austria, via Budapest. The quartet was accused of "spying" and the Hungarians threatened a trial which could have led to a death sentence or lengthy imprisonment. Then, inexplicably, the students were released over the weekend.

PRESS CONFERENCE

Subsequently, the four were met at the Austrian border by British officials and whisked off to the British Embassy in Vienna for a press conference. Facing a brigade of journalists, the students parried questions on their internment and the only substantial fact that emerged was that they had not been maltreated.

But Judith Cripps let it be known that she had objected to a diet of bread and ersatz coffee and had gone on a hunger strike for a few days. After that, her warders gave her eggs and cheese to eat. More recently, Mrs. Cripps announced that Judith was suffering from frostbite in both feet.

Dean Rollins Discusses Entrance Requirements

by STEVE FLEMING

J. Leslie Rollins, Assistant Dean of the Harvard Business School, together with four graduates of the school, John Dobson, John Gray, Tony Griffiths, and Thurston Morton discussed the school and its entrance requirements last night in the Union. Three of these were former McGill students.

Dean Rollins stressed that the school does not teach business but rather an "orientation toward a business job." The school provides the student with a general overall picture of business methods.

The school boasts a well organized Financial Aid Program. A loan is made to the student, 40% of which must be repaid with interest within five years. The rest of the loan may be repaid at any time. In other words, it is a moral obligation.

Each year eight or ten McGill students attend the Harvard Business School. Dean Rollins hopes that McGill University will continue to be well represented. A question and answer period followed.

McGill Faculty Members Hurt

Two McGill University faculty members were injured when a car in which they were passengers went out of control on Reid Boulevard, Sunday night, and hit a concrete upright at the CNR underpass.

Professor Jacob Fried, 32, 3450 McTavish St., an assistant professor of Sociology, was treated for facial and shoulder injuries, and Joshua Yamada, 26, 34 Thornhill Avenue, Westmount, lecturer in mathematics received facial and hand injuries.

Dr. V. T. Naryana, 26, assistant professor of mathematics, who was driving the car was unhurt.

and the School of Natural Sciences.

The rector claimed that only about ten percent of the normal student body had failed to appear.

NCCU WILL SET UP REFUGEE AID

The National Conference of Canadian Universities said tonight it has set up a committee to establish Hungarian refugee students in Canadian universities.

Several universities have offered to waive tuition fees for acceptable students.

The committee, set up at the request of the Federal Immigration Department, will screen students, now lodged under the departments care at a central hostel in Montreal, and recommend them for acceptance at various universities throughout Canada.

There are now 100 students at the Montreal hostel. Another 400 are expected to arrive this Spring.

Rev. Maurice Beauchamp of the University of Ottawa, chairman of the committee, said in a statement that universities so far have offered to waive tuition fees for 125 students. He expects there will be enough offers of free tuition to accommodate many, but not all, of the expected 500.

He appealed to individuals and groups for donations toward a tuition fund and also for offers of room and board in centers where universities are located. Offers should be addressed to the Hungarian Refugee Student Fund at 1162 Saint Antoine St., Montreal.

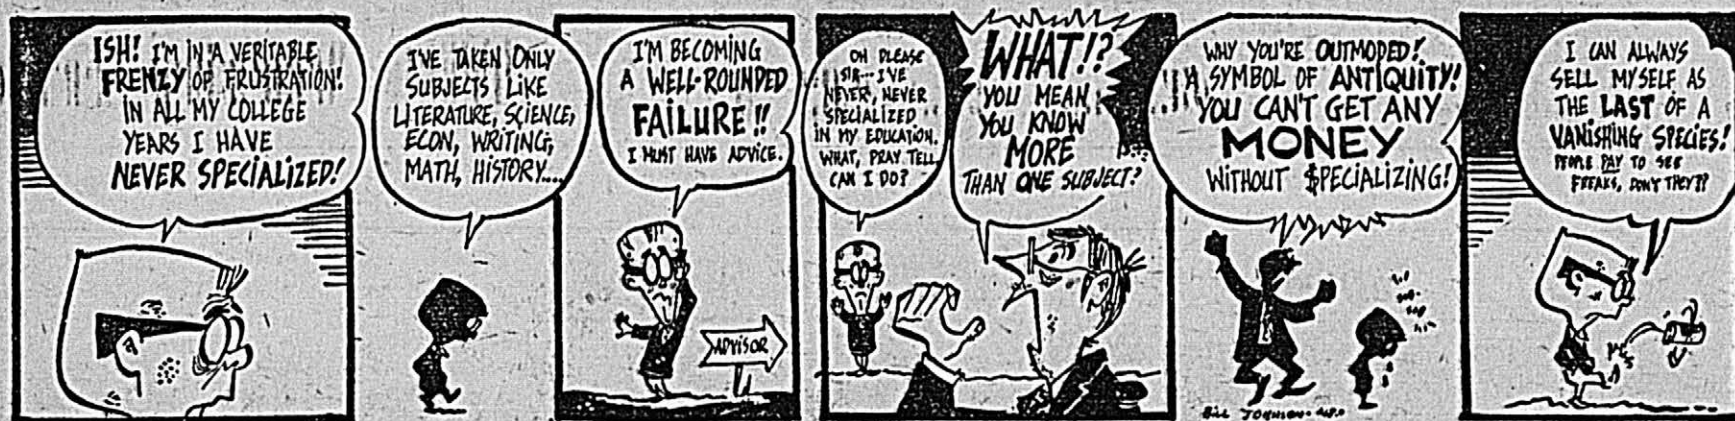

Rev. Beauchamp said some of the students will be able to pay their own way. The Federal Government is helping to find part-time work for the students.

Editorial

Irrevocable

It has come to our attention that another student at this University has been expelled for cheating (cribbing) during a regular examination.

Besides deploring the fact that this sort of thing does seem to exist even at the university level where people are supposed to be more mature than mere kids, there is a special aspect of the expulsion that must be emphasized. This expelled student now is in the unenviable position of a permanent outcast from any university in the world. This may sound strange, but this, in essence, is the situation.

A student can take part in all sorts of shenanigans and foolishness around his university, he may raid the women's dorms, and for all these things, he may be suspended. But the suspension in these cases never carries the stigma that expulsion for cheating does. Invariably, the student who gets into trouble with the authorities for horsing about, manages ultimately to get back into school, once his sentence has been served.

Witness the case of the RVC raiders last spring. Their sentences, although quite severe, allow their admittance back once the year is out. The aforementioned "cribber" will never, under any circumstances, be permitted to return — neither here nor elsewhere.

The point to be made is this: Although cheating during exams should never enter the student's mind, opportunities for fraud do arise. In view of the great penalty that is always imposed, we would suggest that everyone thrust any such notions aside without second thought if only for the very practical reason that the chance of getting caught is simply not worth taking.

Cheating is just like speeding in an automobile. You risk your life ((the similarities are there!)) when you do either.

Compromise Proposal For University Grants

(A Letter to the Montreal Gazette, Monday February 4th)

Sir:

Reading the discussion of proposed federal grants to the universities has made me wonder if the following compromise proposal might not be acceptable:

The problem, it seems to me, is as follows:

(1) Canadian universities desperately need money.

(2) The need is not just for buildings but for teachers—better teachers, better paid.

(3) But I share the distrust of benevolent centralism expressed by many people. Power comfortably and tightly held gradually stifles originality, independence and development. The plan proposed does more or less insulate against federal parliamentary interference but it establishes an educational oligarchy—the board—which despite the high calibre of its members as individuals nevertheless carries the potentiality of developing as an institution, and over the years, within itself all sorts of pressure toward conformity, political manoeuvring, and diminution of the independence of the particular universities.

Sir:

Mr. Regenstreif's vicious anti-Arab, anti-American and anti-UN attitude is understandable. It is an emotional reaction of a frustrated Zionist.

1. Mr. Regenstreif claims to represent the free democracies of the West as he expressed their "dismay at one of the most foolhardy displays in the history of American diplomacy." The unique reception given by President Eisenhower to King Saud is an expression of honour and respect which (for those who really understand the Arab mind) will have the greatest and lasting esteem in the heart of the visiting King. Let it be known that King Saud has more to offer in return. If I were an American I should look forward with anxiety to the outcome of this visit and should feel happy at the dwindling Zionist pressure group which until recently was shaping America's foreign policy towards the Middle East. "Wagner's fiasco", which he created to please his Jewish voters, did not discredit King Saud in American eyes, but it discredited Wagner in Arab eyes.

2. It is certainly surprising that Mr. Regenstreif should go on supporting Israel's act of aggression against Egypt, at a time when an overwhelming majority of the UN members have condemned it as immoral and have passed five resolutions requesting Israel to withdraw her troops forthwith. Israel has, defiantly, refused to evacuate a strip of the Sinai along the Gulf of Aquaba as well as the Gaza Strip. The Secretary-General, basing his judgement on international law and the UN Charter has requested that Israel should comply with the UN resolutions. Obviously, the Israelis have used their invasion as a bargaining counter to gain further concessions. This is rather like a house-breaker offering to return some of the jewelry he has taken in return for keeping the rest.

3. Finally Mr. Regenstreif attacks the Americans for "building up the same trouble makers". It takes great courage and skill in history-twisting to make this allegation. One ought to ask a few questions to find out who is "trouble maker" in that area: who refuses to comply with the UN resolutions giving the right to the refugees (the indigenous inhabitants of Palestine) to return home? And who occupies 85 per cent more territory of Palestine than stipulated by the 1947 Partition Plan? And who has declared to occupy the rest of Palestine and the whole of Jordan? Finally, who has attacked Egypt on October 29, 1956 and brought the world to the verge of a world war? If Israel is so bellicose, then Egypt is certainly entitled to exercise her "belligerent rights" to block the Israeli port of Elath.

What to do? Why is it that everywhere legislation seems to assume that educational grants can only take one of two forms: building appropriations, current income appropriations? What I suggest is that the grants be made not for either of these purposes but for capital investment and endowment only. Provisions in the law should stipulate that the sums given be used for investment only and not for buildings or current outlay. While this means that the universities will only be able to spend the income from the grant after they (not the government) have invested it, it also means that the grants instead of making the universities more dependent would make them more independent of all types of government.

Star Footballer To Fight For Red and White in '57

Carl Hansen Accepted In Medicine

by IRWIN SANKOFF

Carl Hansen, a power-running fullback for Hamilton College during the past four years, could very well end up cavorting in the McGill Redmen's backfield come next autumn.

In an exclusive interview with football coach Donald M. Jones of Hamilton College at Clinton, N.Y., we learned yesterday that Hansen had been accepted in the Faculty of Medicine here at McGill and would probably turn out with the football squad next September.

Late yesterday afternoon we placed a long distance phone call to Clinton and spoke at length with Don Jones. He was very high in his praise for the fullback who broke several records in his four year career with Hamilton. Jones went on to call Hansen "the finest all round back I've seen in small college football play."

Coach Jones felt certain that if Hansen, who he termed as a "very consistent player", played with the Redmen, he would more than hold his own in the Intercollegiate league or in any other league for a matter of fact. Jones added that "Hansen is plenty fast and a hard runner to boot".

The five foot eleven 180 pound fullback is 21 years old and makes his home in South Hampton, Long Island. He has spent the last four years taking the pre-med course at Hamilton.

Last season Hansen, who plays both defensive and offensive ball, was elected co-captain of the Hamilton eleven and received honourable mention when the time came for picking the Little All-American football team. This was in itself a tribute to the player, for recognition on a national level does not come too often to players from the smaller colleges such as Hamilton.

The "outstanding back" led his team last year as they piled up an impressive five and two record in exhibition play. The Clinton crew, paced by Hansen, won their first five games, and then were edged out in their final two contests of the season. In losing their final two games, the Hamilton team bore a remarkable similarity to last year's edition of the Redmen. Both defeats were by a one point margin. The Redmen lost four games by a total of 11 points.

Offensively, Hansen led the team in rushing, breaking several Hamilton team records in the process and picking up seven touchdowns in the seven games. Defensively he was a standout in every game. Besides being a "terrific runner", Hansen throws the occasional pass, but really sparkles on kick returns.

About the subject of kickoff and punt returns, Jones had several words of praise for the boy. "He's really good on long runbacks, both for punts and kickoffs. Several times in the past seasons he's racked up runs of anywhere from 75 to 95 yards. And when he gets into the open, he's one of the hardest men to bring down, and that goes for small or big college backs!"

All in all Jones was very enthusiastic about Carl Hansen. He said that Hansen was a "great competitor. He lives the game and gets a terrific kick out of playing it. We're sorry to see him go, but if he lines up with McGill, and I'm sure he will because he loves football, you'll be mighty pleased with him."

Gridiron Gossip: Vaughan McVey, number one draft choice of the Montreal Alouettes, could be wearing the Red and White of old McGill again next season... He hopes to take some post-grad work in Physics... Claude Benham, star quarterback of the Columbia Lions last year, nearly ended up at McGill... He's going into Dentistry at Virginia because it's nearer to his home town... Larfy Sullivan tried hard to land the triple threat back, but no dice... Tim Reid became the second member of last year's Varsity team to pull out of school... Ross Woods pulled up his stakes just after the season... Reports have it that Ron Stewart may take another course at Queen's... If true, that'll mean another year at least of the Golden Gael terror running wild... Jack Behrmann reports that his shoulder injury has completely healed and he's looking forward to next football season... Ditto Wally Bulchak... Merv Shaw and Rae Brown keeping busy in the off-season at the MWS as goal judges... Brown is said to becoming puck-shy as Leo Konyk's drive continue to bounce off the screen around Rae's head.

Redmen Face Big Test With Varsity Friday

"Every game is a big game from now on," said Redmen hockey coach Rocky Robillard up at the MWS last night as he put his hockey charges through their paces.

"If we're going to get near the top of the league, we've got to win all our games from here on in. We were okay Friday, but we missed too many goals. It's okay to miss them in the games we win, but it's the ones we missed in the losing games that keep me from sleeping at nights."

"Right now we're getting ready for Toronto this Friday. That's a big one. We'll try and win them one at a time, but we certainly can't afford to lose many more."

With that Rocky blew his whistle and sent his team through a scrimmage session. "First goal wins," he called out.

Thirty seconds later Keith Lawes scored and Len "S.P." Sigurdson, court jester of the team threw up his hands and said "We lost," and started to skate to the dressing room. However Rocky kept him on the ice for the remainder of the hour.

At practice's end the two squads of sweating players found themselves tied up at six or seven goals apiece. Just about everyone scored including coach Robillard who couldn't resist taking the puck in on the goaler when the opportunity presented itself.

The possession of capital endowment would be a potent force toward autonomy.

Investment of these funds would also mean that not merely would they not add to inflationary consumption income pressure but would increase the supply of financial capital in a capital-hungry country.

It would also seem desirable to make capital grants of this sort to new universities more than merely to push the existing universities to an unwieldy size.

This proposal is offered merely tentatively and in hope it might give rise to fruitful discussion.

Security Council Ends Without any Decision

Both the resolutions discussed on Friday night by the Model Security Council died before reaching a vote, during a rowdy session in the course of which the Hungarian delegate was expelled for refusing to stop speaking.

Yugoslavia withdrew her resolution to remove all foreign bases from Europe, after seeing that it was not conducive to world peace. The United States delegation referred its declaration (that the credentials of the Hungarian were not acceptable) to the Steering Committee to be reworded, to conciliate Cuba and Peru.

Puns and accusations were rampant, and Mr. Rene Pouliot, the President of the Council, was forced to make frequent use of the gavel presented to him by the United Nations Club for his help.

At the end of the session David Franklin, the President of the United Nations Club, thanked all the delegates for their participation and the meeting was adjourned.

IUDL DEBATES

Both McGill's Inter-University Debating League teams were defeated last night by Bishop's University—in Lennoxville by a unanimous decision, and Montreal by a narrow margin. By IUDL rules, although losing by a 2-1 decision of the judges, McGill's affirmative team was ahead on total points.
